Warm Lemon, Honey, and Ginger Soother

This honey ginger tea with lemon is a tangy infusion inspired by a combination of Indian, Egyptian, and Costa Rican wisdom for soothing the common cold. Make a pot in the morning when you are not feeling well and drink throughout the day, reheating by the mugful as needed. My husband and I keep these ingredients on hand throughout the winter just because we like them. For children, add a splash of orange juice to cool it down.

Prep Time: 5 mins

Additional Time: 5 mins

Total Time: 10 mins

Servings: 4

Yield: 4 cups

Ingredients

- ¼ cup honey, or to taste
- 1 lemon, juiced
- 1 tablespoon finely grated ginger root
- ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 3 ½ cups boiling water

Directions

Step 1

Gather all ingredients. Boil water.

Step 2

Place honey, lemon juice, ginger, and cinnamon in a teapot or 4-cup glass measuring beaker with spout. Pour boiling water over mixture; stir until honey is dissolved.

Step 3

Cover the teapot and let steep for 5 minutes. The ginger should sink to the bottom but may be strained while pouring into a mug.

Recipe Tip

Peel the ginger root before grating, as it can sometimes be bitter.
